INTRODUCTION

In this globalization era, many people want to learn English, to be able to speak English fluently, and to understand English correctly. As the international language, English is used everywhere, and almost all professions require the ability to speak English. The basic thing to learn English easier is to know a lot of vocabulary. The simple way to do it is through watching movies, because not only know a lot of vocabulary but also know how to pronounce it.

When people watch movies, sometimes they find the difficulty to understand some of the conversations, as they are contained with informal English that does not follow the grammatical rules. One of the informal English that often difficult to understand is slang. Slang is informal and often not proper English. Slang usually created and used among teenagers or among a certain group of people. For example many teenagers in US often used “chick” to refer a young woman, “chicken” to refer a coward people, “dude” to refer a man, and many others. People usually use slang to make the situation more comfortable and friendly, but for people who are still studied English it is difficult to know and understand the meaning.

In short, slang does not only occur in real life but also in movies. Many American movies use slang in their conversation especially movies about gangster or movies with comedy genre, and one of them is Top Five. The characters in this movie often use slang words in their daily conversations, and the main character use slang in many situations. Considering the fact, the writer is interested to conduct the research related to slang words. In this case, the writer chooses “Slang Words Used in Top Five Movie Directed by Chris Rock”.

2). What forms of slang words were found in Top Five movie?
3). What were the functions of slang words used in Top Five movie?

LITERATURE REVIEW

Definition of Sociolinguistics

Sociolinguistics is concerned about how people use language and talk differently to other people in different situations. People tend to use different style of language when speak to other people with different age, social background, or even when they are in different places. All those things can be studied in sociolinguistics.

According to Wardaugh & Fuller (2015:1) “Sociolinguistics is the study of our everyday lives – how language works in our casual conversations and the media we are exposed to, and the presence of societal norms, policies, and laws which address language.” That statement means in sociolinguistic discusses about how people speak differently in different social situations.

Based on Holmes (2013:1) stated “Sociolinguistics is concerned with the relationship between language and the context in which it is used.” It means that sociolinguistics concerned with the way language used in society.

Suhardianto & Ambalegin (2017:4) argues “Sociolinguistics deals with the social aspects contained in society. Sociolinguistics also discusses the different variations of language used in society in describing social phenomena such as the use of slang itself.” It means slang can be known as part of sociolinguistic because there is phenomena which use different variation of language in society.

Based on theories above, the writer may concludes that sociolinguistics is the part of linguistics that studies the relationship between language and society, the way people use language and speak differently in different social situations with the influence of dialect, gender differences, or even social class.

Definition of Slang

According to Coleman (2014:3) “Slang is informal and non-standard, that much is uncontentious. Slang can be used in formal contexts to lower or challenge that formality.” It means that slang can be used in formal context to make the situations less formal.

Widawski (2015:7) stated “While slang in itself is extreme, it also tends to generate extreme attitudes. Most people, consciously or not, use it because of its expressiveness, brevity or humor.” It means sometimes people use slang because slang is catchy and interesting. It is no wonder that slang is popular among teenagers.

While Green (2105:5) argues “Above all its functions, slang is a ‘counter-language’, the language that says no. Born in the street, it resists the niceties of the respectable. It is impertinent, mocking, unconvinced by rules, regulations and ideologies.” That statement means that slang is not an appropriate word, often mocking and do not follow the grammatical rules, so it cannot be used freely in formal situation.

Based on the definitions above the writer concludes that slang is very informal words that often only used by particular groups of people, and sometimes certain slang words also can be used in formal situation to make it less formal. Slang also very popular and cannot be separated from teenage life. Most slang words are spoken and usually considered as inappropriate words because some slang words have vulgar meaning, and do not follow the grammatical rules.

Forms of Slang

According to Widawski (2015:19), “Slang is quintessentially about vocabulary. In any language vocabulary is normally created from already existing words which are either modified or assigned new meanings; sometimes, entirely novel words are coined or borrowed from other languages.” It means slang can be created from various word formations, they are as follows:

b. Initialism

Initialism is form of slang created by abridged the words. It consists of the initial letters of words pronounced in sequenced, spelled using capital letters, and often followed by periods. In extreme case of initialism, the word can be abridged to just one letter which is capitalized.

c. Eponyms

Eponyms form a modest yet discernible word-acquisition process. These are expressions derived from personal names, often of inventors or creators, or names of fictitious characters. Eponyms play a marginal role because they normally require concrete knowledge which enables the speaker to associate the expression with the name.

d. Brand Names

Brand names are names protected by legal trademarks and are used to distinguish one product from similar ones offered by competitors. These play a marginal role because they tend to undergo the process of generalization or assimilation and may lose not only their original capitalization, but also their original meanings.

Each main forms divided into more specific forms, they are compounding, affixation, phraseology, clipping, initialism, acronym, verbification, nominalization, other process, loanwords, loan translation, eponyms, brand names, coinage, onomatopoeia, and respelling.
